WELLS-METZ THEATRE
IU Theatre + Dance acknowledges and honors the Indigenous communities native to this region, and recognizes that Indiana University Bloomington is built on Indigenous homelands and resources. We recognize the myaamiki, Lênape, Bodwéwadmik, and saawanwa people as past, present, and future caretakers of this land.

LIVE PERFORMANCE

The mission of the Department of Theatre, Drama, and Contemporary Dance is to advance the art, scholarship, and appreciation of theatre and dance and its place in society. We pursue this mission collectively and as individuals through theatrical productions, scholarship and publication, presentation of our work in national and international venues, formal instruction, and individual mentoring.

The Department of Theatre, Drama, and Contemporary Dance is accredited by the National Association of Schools of Theatre and is a member of the University/Resident Theatre Association and United States Institute for Theatre Technology.

LIVING IMPACT
Greetings and welcome to the IU Theatre and Dance 2023-2024 production season!

We are thrilled with the productions we have for our students and audiences this year.

Live performance is a place for communities to gather for engaged storytelling. Our stories this year continue with our tradition of bringing the most exciting, meaningful, and entertaining work to our audiences. We continue to use live performance as an opportunity to express the zeitgeist of our world. We hope that you will consider joining us for many additional lectures, discussions, and collaborations throughout the season.

This year we welcome a new generation of graduate and undergraduate students that will directly contribute to the artistry and craft. We’d like to take a moment to welcome many guest artists to our season – from choreography and music direction to directing and designing. We’d also like to welcome Dr. Sarah Johnson, who joins our faculty as the Head of Dramaturgy, and David Tracy, our new Public Relations and Audience Development Specialist.

We’d also like to take a moment to bid a fond farewell to Laura Judson and Madison Colquette, two fantastic staff members in our department community who are moving on to wonderful new chapters. We thank them for their service to our department and especially to our students.

Thank you to our patrons, donors, Theatre Circle members, and of course YOU, the audience experiencing our students’ work at this performance! Please visit our website or pick up a brochure to learn more about how you can become a member of the Theatre Circle, and to find out more about our upcoming productions, student independent projects, guest artists, student organizations, and class offerings. We look forward to having you join us for all our live performances this year and wish you our very best for the 2023-2024 academic year!

With Gratitude,

Director's note

“In fifty years since Cabaret premiered, sadly I still believe ‘it can happen here’. Maybe wherever human beings live, it can happen. We have to accept that possibility. If so, how damned sad.”

Hal Prince (Director, Cabaret, 1966)

In February 2023, during our first design meeting, I stated how desperately I wished Cabaret was a museum piece, but unfortunately, that is not the case. A report from the Anti-Defamation League found that antisemitic incidents increased by 36% in 2022 to the highest level since 1979. My goal and purpose in doing this show is to warn the audience of how quickly hate can overtake communities, governments, and countries. We cannot repeat history. Cabaret was needed when it originally opened on Broadway in 1966, during the height of the Civil Rights Movement, and its challenge and reminder to audiences rings just as true today.

In the 1920s, Berlin was a transformative place to be: women were starting to be fixtures in the work force, queer spaces existed and were embraced, and art flourished. It was a free, creative, expressive, and innovative time where uniqueness was celebrated. In the 1930s, Hilter and the Nazi party started to gain momentum in a powerful way. They believed in a ‘pure German’ or ‘Aryan’ race. They were hateful toward groups who were not like them. Their hate was not only toward Jewish people but also Roma and Sinti people, Black people, Slavic people, disabled people, LGBTQ+ people, communists, trade unionists, social democrats, and religious groups who had opposing opinions to the Nazi party. Cabaret takes place in 1930 at the intersection of these two clashing worlds. Like a champagne bottle on the precipice of explosion.

According to many musical theatre historians, Cabaret is said to be the first concept musical. A concept musical is one whose book and score are structured around conveying a theme or message rather than emphasizing a narrative plot (although Cabaret does have a linear plot as well.) There are real world scenes and songs and diegetic Cabaret songs (that mostly comment on the action). The Emcee is not only entertaining in his Kit Kat Klub numbers but also illustrating changes in the German mind as the show progresses. It is important to note that this show is based on the play I Am a Camera by John Van Druten which is based on the novel Goodbye to Berlin by Christopher Isherwood. The character of Sally Bowles is based on real life Cabaret singer, Jean Ross.

Notable Cabaret Productions:
1966: Original Broadway Production (Director: Hal Prince, Choreographer: Ron Field)
1972: Film (Director/Choreographer: Bob Fosse)
1998 Broadway Revival (Director: Sam Mendes, Choreographer: Rob Marshall)
2021: West End Revival (Director: Rebecca Frecknall, Choreographer: Julia Cheng)
So why do another production of Cabaret at Indiana University? Beyond the call to action to create theatre for social justice, Cabaret is a really well written piece of theatre. Joe Masteroff’s scenes are simple and clear. The subject matter dives much deeper than the more traditional musicals of the 1960s (the height of Golden Age musical theatre). Kander and Ebb’s score is rooted in real authentic Berlin Jazz of the time. The piece is reminiscent of The Threepenny Opera, paying homage to Weill’s tunes and a similar Brechtian style of theatre making. Exposing our performers, designers, and faculty to this piece has been pure joy. It is a challenge to work on but also a ton of fun! Many will go on to do productions of Cabaret professionally and I’m glad they have been exposed to this piece here on the university level where we can provide extensive research and time to explore these scenes and songs.

“What do you hunger for?” That was my question to the cast of Cabaret on day one of rehearsal. Every character in Cabaret is hungering for something and I tasked each actor with identifying what that was and build their character and show around that need. In working on the piece, we found that 1930 Weimar Germany didn’t feel that dissimilar to our world right now—hungry for connection, for passion, for purpose. It is my hope that our students’ personal take on these iconic characters will make this classic feel brand new to our Bloomington audiences.

RUTH N. HALLS THEATRE
“There was a cabaret, and there was a Master of Ceremonies, and there was a city called Berlin in a country called Germany, and it was the end of the world..."

Before it was the end of the world, it was Weimar. An area in central Germany that was a focal point for the German Enlightenment and home to Goethe and Schiller, Weimar gave its name to the Weimar Republic because the Republic’s constitution was written there (Berlin was thought too dangerous at the time due to uprisings and street clashes).

From 1918-1933, at the end of Germany’s Imperial period until the beginning of the Nazi regime, there was a moment of vibrant exploration around what it might mean to be human—a bold attempt to push life’s possibilities and limits. In that decade and a half, the Weimar Republic was home to creative investigations of many forms: in art, there was Bauhaus, New Objectivity, photomontage, and the expansion of Dada, as well as jazz and twelve-tone music. In shifting social freedoms, the rise of the New Woman, lesbianism, homosexuality, and gender fluidity all become an available, if not fully accepted, part of society (in Isherwood’s words: “Berlin means boys”). Alongside sexual liberty, sex workers became a fixed part of the urban scene, especially in Berlin and Munich. For more molecular pleasure, there is private and public experimentation with drugs.

All these cultural shifts could be discovered, discussed, or danced through at the cabaret. While Berlin’s first cabaret dates to 1901, once Kaiser Wilhelm abdicated (in 1918), the restrictions around entertainment began to ease. Cabarets become a vital setting for these societal shifts to gain momentum (and adherents). In the shadow of a catastrophic world war and a calamitous monetary collapse—in which prices are so high they are listed by weight rather than Reichsmarks—a new freedom beckons. As German society fragments, almost fails, and then begins to stabilize, its citizens have occasion to reevaluate.

Set toward the end of this period, Cabaret isn’t centered in the destruction the Third Reich will deliver but rather in its buildup. While it might be easier to present history’s outcomes and conclusions, Weimar was the slippery time before the axe came down. Cabaret isn’t the story of an avalanche but rather of accumulating snow; it takes place during the deliberate, icy buildup of intolerance, prejudice, and hate: Kristallnacht is still eight years away.

What is the last straw? What will finally turn the tide, tip the scale, break the camel’s back? History turns on the moment when citizens revolt against evil, but as catastrophe grows, it’s difficult to decide how to take action. And so, a cold stasis settles in. As has been pointed out throughout Cabaret’s life: everyone thinks they’ll be Cliff, but they are more likely to be Fräulein Schneider.

Dramaturg's note

"There was a cabaret, and there was a Master of Ceremonies, and there was a city called Berlin in a country called Germany, and it was the end of the world..."
Dramaturg's note

Throughout the history of this work—started by Isherwood (Berlin Stories), carried forward by Van Druten (I am a Camera), and then Kander and Ebb as Cabaret—it’s been an account of outsiders. Nearly all the characters in this show would run afoul of the Third Reich and Nazi beliefs (as would many working on it). We speak with those represented in the play and as ourselves: as those who value education, as people who believe in democracy, and love.

Part of this work’s performance is to speak for otherness. Part is to remind us of those who were lost, buried under the weight of hatred. Part is to mark our own particularly dangerous time as democracy teeters on a knife edge.

We might not be in the avalanche, but friends, it’s surely snowing.

Inspired by Indiana University’s motto, the College of Arts and Sciences presents its final themed semester this fall. Themester 2023 focuses on Lux et Veritas | Light and Truth and explores the nature, history, artistic and scientific expressions of light and truth, as well as the cultural role of inquiry in relation to these concepts as they are found in the arts and sciences...and beyond.

SPECIAL THANKS to our 2022–2023 and 2023–2024 season Associate Producers

The contributions of Associate Producers directly fund an IU Theatre production of the donor’s choice. As an associate producer, you will help directly support the cost of a production’s costume, scenic, lighting, sound, and projection design.

Your name will be featured in our programs and all curtain speeches. You will also enjoy benefits as year-round members of Theatre Circle, an organization founded to promote and encourage the study and practice of theatre arts in the Department of Theatre, Drama, and Contemporary Dance and an awareness of theatre throughout the community.

For more information, please scan the QR code, pick up a Theatre Circle brochure in the lobby, or contact David Tracy at davtracy@iu.edu

You can also visit the Department of Theatre, Drama, and Contemporary Dance website at theatre.indiana.edu and select the Theatre Circle link under Alumni+Giving.
